

GOT HIM, GOT HIM, NEED HIM

If the delirious agony of not being able to get that Bobby Orr rookie card when you were a kid still has you chuffed, why not have Mr. Orr lording over you as a portrait-sized oil painting, looking just like he did on that Topps card. And why stop with No. 4? What about a fire-in-his-eyes Rocket, his hair glistening with Brylcreem, or Bobby Hull without his front teeth holding up that 50th goal puck?

Jeremie White will paint it for you. The Victoria artist's commissions pander to his passions — to hockey and to the memories he stockpiled with a vast collection of trading cards.

“Usually people are referring back to childhood memories and connections. It's much deeper than the actual physical card. It's all of the sentiment from their childhood, which led me to doing it in the first place.”

Visit www.sportsart.ca.

Portrait pop art

